

Screening young athletes for heart risks

Mainstream cardiology says that early heart screening isn't cost effective, since congenital heart abnormalities kill fewer than one in 100. But parents and physicians are starting their own screening centers across the country. The Wall Street Journal's Kevin Helliker and Dr. Jonathan Drezner discuss on Lunch Break with Tanya Rivero.

To watch the video please click HERE.